LegalDesk.com has unveiled a new technology that enables notorisation of documents electronically.

The proposed eNotary solution will verify a person's identity by using a combination of Aadhaar-based authentication and video/audio recorded interview. With the eNotary system attestation, authentication and verification of legal instruments can be done remotely.

LegalDesk.com unveiled the new technology at a conference on digitisation of the Indian legal system here in collaboration with iSpirit Foundation.

Prabhuling K Navadgi, Additional Solicitor General of India, said, "This is a phenomenal initiative and a great way to examine the digitization of legal system in India. The concept of eNotary is very appealing and the concept can be further extended to digitize court records and for property and document registration procedure."

Ashok Kadsur, co-founder of LegalDesk.com, said once approved by the government, the eNotary initiative will be one of its kind as it would help people get notarization done in absentia.
